An interview with Jordan Blackwood

by Melissa Slade, Career Development Specialist

Melissa: How long have you been partnered with Visions Employment Plus Inc.?

Jordan: In November 2014, we hired Clarence to detail vehicles at our Mount Pearl location.

Melissa: How did you first become aware of Supported Employment?

Jordan: During my return flight from a work conference in Dallas, Texas in early 2014, I was surfing through the in-flight TV entertainment. After realizing I had watched all the new release movies (I cannot sleep on an airplane) I was browsing through the business and news sections. There was a program based upon the unconventional employee pool and their ability to exceed expectations as well as the performance of their coworkers. After watching this article, and understanding our future need for an employee, I talked with my father and brothers; it was obvious they were also interested in testing the waters. I first reached out to the Autism Society and after a conversation regarding the potential job, the garage work environment, and our expectations, it was recommended to contact Visions Employment Inc. to ensure that a suitable employee and job coach be sourced.

Melissa: How has your experience as an inclusive employer enhanced your business environment?

Jordan: Not only has morale improved at each location that Clarence visits on a weekly basis, but our managers and sales staff have been commended by customers regarding City Tire & Auto's commitment to work inclusion. Some customers have even went that extra step to call me personally to show their admiration for our involvement.

Melissa: Is there anything you would like to say to other employers who may be reluctant in partnering with a Supported Employment agency?

Jordan: We are thrilled with the result and encourage other employers to participate in such an enriching program. Your customers will soon realize your social contribution to the community and will share their experiences with others. For those potential employers who are reluctant to take the plunge; concerned with the type of work or the work load required for that position - Right from the start Visions Employment Inc. was excited to work with us, determining that the position we're offering was suitable and prescreening candidates to ensure the possible new-hire was able and willing to complete the job. Even after employment, the Visions staff were eager to assist in coaching the employee as well as the management teams at City Tire & Auto, to ensure a healthy long-term connection. We were pleasantly surprised that even a job coach was provided. This was greatly welcomed during the early stages of employment where Clarence needed time to learn the job tasks, work schedules, and develop routines. It has been over a year since the departure of his job coach and we see no need to change this anytime soon. Clarence keeps busy, takes pride in his work, is meticulous, and incredibly punctual... all welcomed attributes of an employee.
